PWD Meridian Restores Fire Station Doors Following Tornado Impact

From Staff Reports

Following the F1 tornado that swept through Naval Air Station (NAS) Meridian in December 2024, the Navy Facilities Engineering Systems Command Southeast (NAVFAC SE) Public Works Department (PWD) has completed replacement of all four of the airfield fire station's bay doors, which had been destroyed in the storm.

The new doors received their final inspection and were turned over for beneficial occupancy on July 1, 2025. In the immediate aftermath of the tornado, PWD in-house forces demonstrated innovation under pressure and ensuring mission-critical operations continued uninterrupted. Technicians removed the storm debris from the building to re-construct entirely from salvaged materials such as damaged Aircraft Protection Enclosures (APEs) and other storm-blown debris. This temporary structure remained in use from December through June, ensuring fire protection services at NAS Meridian remained fully operational during the entire recovery period and protecting vital infrastructure by retaining heat, deflecting rain, and shielding the bay from additional environmental hazards.

This effort exemplifies the fundamental values of PWD, NAS, and NAVFAC SE with the successful completion of the permanent roll-up door installation in June.

US Marines Mobilized to Los Angeles are Being Sent Home

By Haley Britzky
CNN

Roughly 700 active-duty US Marines who were mobilized last month to respond to protests in Los Angeles are being sent home from the mission, the Pentagon said Monday.

“With stability returning to Los Angeles, the Secretary has directed the redeployment of the 700 Marines whose presence sent a clear message: lawlessness will not be tolerated,” chief Pentagon spokesman Sean Parnell said in a statement Monday, adding that their “rapid response, unwavering discipline, and unmistakable presence were instrumental in restoring order.”

Parnell announced last week that Secretary of Defense Pete Hegseth had released 2,000 California National Guard members with the 79th Infantry Brigade Combat Team from duty.

The Marines, with 2nd Battalion, 7th Marines, 1st Marine Division, were mobilized in June and assisted in protecting federal buildings and personnel. They were intended to provide the task force overseeing the federal protection mission in LA “with adequate numbers of forces to provide continuous coverage of the area in support of the lead federal agency,” US Northern Command said at the time.

There are still another roughly 2,000 California Army National Guard soldiers assigned to the mission who were mobilized later in June.

California Gov. Gavin Newsom in a statement Monday called for the remaining National Guard soldiers to be withdrawn from the state.

“The women and men of the California National al Guard deserve more than to continue serving as puppets in Trump and Stephen Miller’s performative political theater,” Newsom said. “There was never a need for the military to deploy against civilians in Los Angeles. The damage is done, however. We, again, call upon them to do the right thing and end the militarization once and for all.”

Los Angeles Mayor Karen Bass welcomed the decision to withdraw the Marines. “This is another win for Los Angeles but this is also a win for those serving this country in uniform,” Bass said in a statement on Monday. “Just this morning I stood with Veterans, families of active duty officers, and business leaders to show the impact of this unnecessary, unprecedented, and unconstitutional assault on our city.”

The Marines’ deployment to LA was immediately met with criticism as a significant escalation of the use of the military by President Donald Trump. LA Police Department Chief Jim McDonnell said at the time that the arrival of Marines “absent clear coordination” would present “a significant logistical and operational challenges for those of us charged with safeguarding this city.”

The Marines, like the National Guardsmen who were activated under Title 10 status, were prohibited from conducting law enforcement activity, which is outlawed under the Insurrection Act.

Newsom said in a statement in June that the “level of escalation is completely unwarranted, uncalled for, and unprecedented,” adding the Trump administration was “mobilizing the best in class branch of the U.S. military against its own citizens.”

A senior Pentagon official said during a congressional hearing last month that the mobilization of the Marines and National Guardsmen was estimated to cost $134 million.

“The current estimated cost is $134 million, which is largely just [temporary duty] cost, travel, housing, food, etc.,” Bryn MacDonnell, a special assistant to the Secretary of Defense and official performing the duties of the Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller), told the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Defense.

NAS North Island Expected to host San Diego’s First NASCAR Race

By Ben Higgins
ABC 10News San Diego

San Diego is expected to be announced as the newest location for a NASCAR race, with Naval Air Station North Island in Coronado as the venue.

Multiple reports indicate that NASCAR will announce later this week that San Diego will host a race in 2026, replacing the Chicago street race which is going on pause.

ABC 10News has confirmed that the race will take place on Father’s Day weekend next June on the base at North Island.

The venue will provide spectacular views of San Diego Bay, Point Loma, the Coronado Bay Bridge, and the San Diego skyline for racing fans.

Frank Marchese, who covers motorsports for radio station 97.3 The Fan, says this is significant for the local racing community.

“It’s a massive deal for racing fans. To be able to have your premier sport, at least racing sport, in the United States, come to your city... that is an absolutely massive deal, and something NASCAR has been looking to try to do.”

NASCAR was forced to abandon Southern California on an annual basis when the Auto Club Speedway in Fontana closed in 2023. Currently, the only California race on the NASCAR circuit is the annual stop in Sonoma.

Marchese believes a new race in San Diego could draw fans from across the region.

“People from all over Southern California, middle California, through Arizona, Las Vegas...there’s a very good chance people are going to come from far and wide to see this race,” Marchese told ABC 10News.

The planned location on North Island could help San Diego avoid traffic problems that have plagued other cities hosting races.

“Not being located dead-center of downtown San Diego like Chicago was might help this race’s longevity,” Marchese said.
